Due to the specific construction of a wool hair fibre and the distance between the hairs on a sheepskin, an intermediate layer is filled with stagnant air, this enables that a sheepskin naturally has a breathable and ventilating effect. "The natural air condition of wool", warm in winter and cool in summer.

Sheep wool is naturally water-repellent and absorbent. The wool can absorb up to 30% of its own weight of moisture, without the fur feeling wet or clammy.
